Dear Committee,

I am no expert about any of our wild life creatures, but it seems to me that the sage grouse living in an area would need food in order to live. If there is no food, the animal or bird will move or die. I have friends who put out bird seed for the birds most of the year. Are you going to feed the sage grouse in order to keep them from extinction? How does a vehicle in the area keep them from eating? I think you are concerned about their reproductive habitat. Maybe you should be concerned about keeping the sage bushes growing. I have several in my yard. This seems to be a very silly use of our government time.

Most sincerely,

Marlis Laursoo
