Comments (use back if needed):

I am a coal miner that has already been affected by this and have had to move my wife and 3 children out of our state of Colorado to Utah. If they don't allow our mine to lease it may affect many families involved in the mining industry from truck drivers to vendors all the way down to the children of those parents. We have been supported by coal for 8 years and wish to have low cost power bills by mining coal for Utah. IF 2,000 people lets say lost their jobs in Los Angeles you wouldn't even notice the affects but if those same 2000 people lost their jobs in our small communities it would devastate many surrounding counties economically with at that point they might have to use government assistance.
