America's National parks and public lands were created to be a place to preserve and respect nature. It is unfathomable that coal mining would EVER be allowed on these lands; and the fact that coal is sold off at insanely low rates would be laughable if it wasn't so saddening. We need to protect our public lands for our Native animals and for current and future generations of tax-paying Americans who deserve the opportunity to enjoy these areas.

The people of Wyoming, I urge you to utilize your famous "Big Sky", the constant winds and the big solar reactor in the sky/the sun, if you claim to love and respect your lands and people so much.

US Department of Interior I thank you for finally talking about coal reforms. The will of the majority of the people is evident - coal must remain in the ground ~~and~~ because people value air and water more.

We need to show the world that we are committed to keeping our promise of the Paris Agreement by keeping unclean energy sources in the ground and transitioning to clean energy infrastructure as soon as possible here at home.
