Comments (use back if needed):

My hope is that as America progresses in our energy programs, we can stop mining coal. There are other energy sources that will fill our demands that are cleaner and healthier than extracting, transporting, shipping and burning coal. Coal mining should cease and communities near mines can create new jobs in the solar, wind, or other growing industries. My big concern is that as coal mines go broke they will avoid necessary clean-up to sites, and pass the burden to the public. I recommend that the moratorium stay in place, leases not be renewed, and steps taken to supervise both the closure and clean-up of coal mines. They are the industry of the last generation, not the future, and together I feel the goal of our country should be to make steps now & in the future for "clean" energy. When it comes to coal mines, let's do the right thing and close the mines & quit shipping coal to China.

Thank you, Liz Talley
