Decades ago I wrote my first ever letters to congress to advocate for the defense of this special place. The arguments for doing so are many and I believe have only grown stronger over the last 20+ years. Even as the technology for oil extraction may have advanced to help mitigate the ill effects of its operation, a fundamental irony remains: we would invade a fragile, pristine, vital, and very limited environment for the short term gain of a substance whose very use threatens that same environment, and our entire environment anyway....Just say NO! This piece of the planet and the action of protecting it should absolutely stand as representative of the pushback against our myopic and hubristic human tendency.

Your job as a representative of us as a people and as a nation is to take the long view and help guide us toward a future of broader possibilities. So do your job and help steer this massive ship away from ANWR.
