Bureau of Land Management: I am writing to express my deep concern about your plans to allow oil drilling in the Arctic National Wildlife Refuge. This is an incredibly precious place, the last true wilderness in the state and indeed, in the United States. To allow drilling risks major and irreversible damage to thousands of animals, birds, and the forests. And this is utterly unnecessary. There is already a glut of oil and gas leases, and no need for any further exploration.

Please reconsider this step, and do everything you can to preserve the integrity and beauty of this critical wilderness.

Thank you.
