The plan to drill for oil in the last truly wild place in Alaska is sad and a disappointment to me and my family. We live in Washington state where this oil is going to be sent for processing. This means more ships that can become the Exxon Valadez, you know the one that won't pay the fine from spilling how many barrels of oil into the waterways of Alaska. The dead bays off Washington where the oil and gas industry is located. I say emphatically NO to any more drilling in Alaska. Soon Canada will be shipping tar sands to Vancouver which means more ships with spill-able oil.

Stop the madness and stop trying to kill the last wild place. When there is no more oil in the world let this be the one known place for it. Then leave it there!

A concerned United States citizen.
