I continue to support no drilling for oil (or digging for gold, etc) in the Arctic National Wildlife Refuge. The refuge is too precious and unique to be drilling for oil in it or by it. Despite what the potential drillers and builders of the pipeline say or even promise, you know the pipeline will leak, eventually. That will cause irreparable harm to the land and everything living on or by it. I don't believe a limited supply of oil is worth that. Many seabirds are already in danger (their numbers); an oil spill may just push them over the edge of no return. Save the Arctic National Wildlife Refuge by not allowing drilling for oil anywhere near it. There are other sources of fuel, ones that won't run out and aren't as potentially damaging to the environment and its inhabitants.

Thank you for your consideration of this very important matter.

Sincerely,

Ms Barbara Kane
