We are very concerned with the proposal to expand oil drilling in Alaska.

The evidence is well known that drilling has had adverse and irrevocable damage to the environment and wildlife. Try as oil companies might to mitigate spills of any kind they have not been able to be 100% safe and I do not believe the risk is worth it. To allow increased permits for drilling is a reckless political decision that impacts our children's future and that of our planet.

The US oil and gas industry already has a massive surplus of leases and permits -- with only half of the federal acreage currently producing. More is not needed!

We concur with the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service 2015 review with more than a million public comments, including scientists, biologists and Alaska Native communities -- Stop more drilling in Alaska.
