Dear Representative,

I am writing to you as a concerned citizen urging the government to reconsider the opening of lands to drilling in the Arctic National Wildlife Refuge. This large pristine area is home to many animals, such as caribou, polar bears, golden eagles, wolves, who depend on the untouched area to successfully breed and continue the success of their species. Allowing drilling, even in just a few hundred acres, will put these animals at risk in terms of disturbances, human encroachment, and the risk of oil spills and sparks that could lead to devastating fires in times of drought. Please understand that this area is also a spiritual one for natives and a treasure of the United States of America and its people. The United States is recognized for the state of Alaska and its unscathed beauty and wilderness, so please do not risk putting a national treasure and its wildlife and people at risk. Please DO NOT DRILL in the ANWR. Thank you for your time, Jessica Mosher, Golden, CO 80403
