I am an ordinary Alaskan who has lived in the Fairbanks area since 1963. I was a member of the Alaska Conservation Society and now belong to the Northern Alaska Environmental Center. Some years ago, in thinking about the various environmental issues begging for my attention, I realized that protecting the Arctic Refuge was the most important. I have never been there and I am not a biologist, so I have no special expertise. However, I feel strongly believe that we need to leave one little corner of our land undeveloped. Also, I am concerned about the global warming that is resulting from the burning of fossil fuels, so the last thing we need to do is drill for more of them. I am heartened by the advances that have been made in alternative forms of energy, which make this seem even more ridiculous. Please don't drill in ANWR!
