Hello,

Please reconsider opening the Arctic National Wildlife Refuge to drilling, etc,

This is a very fragile ecosystem which would take hundreds, if not thousands of years to rebound from the devastation.

The ice in the Arctic Circle is melting and wildlife that once inhabited that area is now having to move to the mainland. These animals are already under immense stress.

Given the technology used for fracking and other extraction methods in the lower 48, there is absolutely NO reason to drill in the refuge!

Thank you for your time.
