Please excuse this interruption in your busy day.

The Arctic regions of the planet are now experiencing the effects of climate change. The unseasonable warmings and the melting of sea and land ice are but two of the weather stressors putting the peoples and animals of the ecosystem at risk. The world does not need arctic oil. The destruction of peoples (the Gwitch'in) and their livelihood (the caribou) is a violation of the principles of human rights as expressed in the United Nations charter. Someday the whole world will know and acknowledge that drilling for oil in sensitive territories irrespective of humans and habitat is a crime.

Kind regards,
Robert Wilde
