I grow more alarmed every day at the current administration's lack of regard for the the things that I think "make America great".... our wild places & our wildlife. I am especially concerned about the future of the The Arctic National Wildlife Refuge. This protected land, home to magnificent species of wildlife, is unlike any other place on Earth — it's a source of great national pride. I don't see how anyone could justify opening these lands up to ruin by the oil & gas industry. What a complete and total sellout of the American people and the things we hold dear.

Oil and gas development could have devastating environmental impacts on the Artic National Wildlife Refuge, so I urge the Department of the Interior to uphold the critical protections that are currently in place for this wondrous & important land. The American people do not want OUR places of beauty destroyed, so that the people in an already wealthy industry can get wealthier.

Sincerely,

Hallie Bulleit
