Comment on ANWR

I have been enjoying the Arctic National Wildlife Refuge for the past thirty-five years. My family and friends have hiked hundreds of miles and camped for weeks all over that pristine wilderness. We have been able to float the challenging Quild rivers for days without seeing other wilderness adventurers. We have often seen the major large animals; bears, caribou, musk oxen, moose and wolves. We have also experienced the joy of watching the arrival or departure of the water fowl and tundra birds.

I see no reason for

for developing a single square inch of that
truly pristine wilderness.

Sincerely,
