OFFICE OF THE
EXECUTIVE SECRETARIAT

Secretary Zinke,

The Gwich'in people have lived in Alaska for more than 20,000 years. They consider the Coastal Plain of the Arctic Refuge sacred. And they depend on the Porcupine Caribou Herd - which uses the refuge as a birthing ground.

Now, Trump wants to destroy the Arctic Refuge by opening it up to Big Oil. This would cause irreversible damage to the ecosystem and would devastate the Gwich'in people's way of life.

The Department of the Interior has the power, and the responsibility, to prevent the attack on this indigenous Arctic community and our environment. I understand that the Department of the Interior is asking for public comments on its plans for oil drilling in the Arctic, and I am writing to voice my strong opposition to this plan. The Arctic Refuge is the largest national wildlife refuge in the United States. It consists of nearly 20 million acres of protected lands.

The Coastal Plain that is under threat is the calving and post-calving ground for the Porcupine Caribou Herd. The Gwich'in people have relied on the caribou for millennia and consider the Coastal Plain to be "the sacred place where life begins." We know that oil drilling would cause irreversible damage to this fragile and pristine ecosystem and the communities that inhabit it.

Please reconsider this dangerous plan to drill for oil in the Arctic!

Sincerely,

MARK WIEDER
