Sir.

I am writing in support of keeping ANWR in its natural state. I have visited the area on a wilderness rafting trip through the refuge. It is a beautiful part of our world that needs to be preserved. The coastal area is the only protected arctic coast in Alaska, and there are other areas in the national petroleum area available. It is also a valuable resource for the Caribou herd as it is it's calving area. Development goes against the purpose of the Wildlife Refuge, and their recommendation. I also feel the oil located there will not solve any of the issues facing our nation or the world and once it is developpe it will be gone for ever. Thank you for your time and consideration on this important issue.

Sincerely,

Mark A. Collins
