There could not be a worse more short-sighted idea for land and wildlife and therefore people than drilling in the Arctic Wildlife Refuge. We are mortgaging the future of wildlife and people for a solution to a problem that does not exist. We presently have plenty of fuel resources and are increasing our use of renewable resources daily. The only reason to pursue this plan is to line the pockets of companies that are already successful and could choose to put their investments in more future oriented longer term directions. This philosophy would insure the companies make profits long into the future and would be the responsible direction to go for their shareholders.

There are so few places of beauty left in this world of increasing consumption. The value of protecting this land is far greater than the value of extracting an unnecessary resource. In tact, it is indeed priceless!

Sincerely,

Margaret K. Colvin
