Dear Bureau of Land Management,

I join all those who urge opposition of efforts to allow even the first steps toward drilling in the Arctic National Wildlife Refuge.

As you know, the Trump administration intends to speed up the review process that allows drilling, and they must be stopped. Remember what a National Wildlife Refuge should be.

Remember that your mandate is not to kowtow to the current (and passing) administration, but to maintain against greed and pillage the remaining pieces of land that have been set aside for the future.

I urge you to heed the warnings scientists and environmental experts are now sending you.

Or at least, remember that:

- The wildlife who maintain a tenuous hold on survival depend on you;
- The environment that sustains both them and us depends on you;
- The economic pressure that will speed development of alternate energy depends on you;
- Our children depend on you.

Please, please do all you can to stop the Trump administration and its greedy cohorts in this latest attack on resources that should belong to everybody.

Sincerely,
Carol Cotsonis
