I have been writing letters, sending emails and making phone calls over the past several years every time I have been made aware that the Arctic National Wildlife Refuge (ANWR) is being threatened by proposed oil and gas drilling.

This refuge is a place that needs to be once and for all protected. I have read books and articles by people who have had the privilege of visiting ANWR. Their descriptions of the beauty of the land of and of the animal and plant life that has flourished for centuries there makes it plain to me that drilling for oil is not worth the tampering of such a valuable ecosystem, a place that deserves, no, demands to be left alone.

When will the term "refuge" be declared as the final designation of ANWR. Leave it be -- for the creatures, for the vegetation, for all of us.

Thank you,
Leonard Elliott
