A report from the Living Planet index, the most comprehensive to date, indicates that animal populations plummeted by 58% between 1970 and 2012, with losses on track to reach 67% by 2020. This is an alarming statistic. The Arctic National Wildlife Refuge is one of the greatest truly wild places left on Earth. It's sanctuary to some of the most diverse and magnificent wildlife in Alaska – polar bears, wolves, musk oxen and vast herds of caribou . The environmental impacts from all stages of oil and gas development, including seismic activities, leasing, exploration drilling have no place in this sensitive ecosystem. I urge the Department of the Interior to uphold all protections for the Arctic National Wildlife Refuge.

Sincerely,
Kristen Eide-Tollefson
