I am writing to ask the Bureau of Land Management to stop the discussion around drilling in the Alaska National Wildlife Refuge and to instead protect this unique and amazing landscape. I live in Alaska and hear over and over the argument from our politicians that we must reap the land of all that it is worth. To them the land is nothing but short-term profit to be exploited. We must stop this short-term vision of what our lands and waters are and work to instead protect the few places that we have left that are untouched and wild. To do otherwise is to compromise our and our children's futures.

The US government was established to protect all people who call this place home, not to only promote the interests of big oil. Please stand up for these ideals and the people of the United States.
