I would like to add my voice to those who are protesting against drilling for oil and gas in the protected Arctic region. This region is environmentally unique and sensitive. The inhabitants have worked hard to co-exist with their surroundings and to live sustain-ably. Once the delicate balance of the Eco-system is destroyed it cannot be restored again. The human race has already done untold damage to our planet; surely it is time to take our responsibility for maintaining it seriously? We need to consider the long term implications for the planet and not act according to short term greed.

Surely the USA would like to be remembered in history as the country that saved the world not as the one that destroyed it through pursuing selfish, greedy aims?
