To whom it may concern,

Regarding the gas and oil development leases of the Coastal Plain of Alaska,

I believe there must be a plan for cleaning up the area once spills and other mishaps occur, as they are certain to do, given the long history of petroleum disasters throughout the US and the world. I propose requiring all gas and oil companies that obtain Coastal Plain leases to set aside a percentage of their profits for a Cleanup Fund. The percentage should be high, given the environmental costs that will be incurred by the people of the US when the disasters occur. These cleanup costs must also fund the ecologists' research that will determine cleanup criteria and will determine when the cleanup is complete.

Sincerely,

Rod Adams
