Comments:

I have heard many comments at rallies and on the radio over the past 20~~for~~ 30 years that I've been old enough to understand Alaskan extraction issues. I feel that more and more people and science have risen to show that extraction has destruction that reaches further than anyone guessed. Economics, from our own universities (UAA), has shown that single resource extraction does not help the local economy. Science has shown: the extreme negative impact of ~~and~~ fossil fuel usage, the negative impact of health of people near the projects, the possible negative impact of further extraction and the impossibility of developing without these negative impacts. There is more than a dollar that is valuable in the arctic. Please stop trying to expand and please especially stop trying to expand into protected lands.
